Meryl Moritz is a Master Certified Coach of senior executives, their teams, and high-potentials who are intent on delivering increasingly greater performance and improving business results.

Since 1994, Meryl has coached men and women on five continents: many in the C-suite; others heading lines of business, and regional/country/practice leaders in such global organizations as American Express, AT&T, Boehringer Ingelheim, Booz & Co., Credit Suisse First Boston, Cummins Engineering, Genentech, Goldman Sachs, Johnson & Johnson, Panasonic, Sony, Standard Chartered Bank, The Chartis Group, Towers Watson, and Verizon. She was a partner in a coaching consortium, Leadership Strategies in Princeton, NJ until 2002, when she founded Meryl Moritz Resources LLC to deliver coaching to leaders; to support organizations in designing and implementing internal coaching programs; and to mentor executive and internal coaches.

Her coaching draws on 20 years of corporate consulting, marketing, management and facilitation expertise. Most relevant are her experiences as a senior executive at two international firms (Hill & Knowlton, Inc., global public relations and public affairs specialists, and Louis Harris & Associates, global public opinion and market research experts) and as an entrepreneur.

Her views on management, executive development and coaching have been published in numerous books (The Human Side of High Technology: DePaul University Press; Using Your Sales Force as a Vital Resource: AMACOM); and featured in business articles in the International Journal of Coaching in Organizations, Working Woman, Fast Track, and others.

Meryl is on faculty of the University of Miami's Certified Professional Coach program, an examiner for Teachers College Columbia University's Executive Coaching program, and executive coaching expert and educator for Shanghai-based PEMI Institute.

Meryl holds the Masters of Science degree in organizational sociology from Hunter College, a BA in Literature from Carleton College, and has completed a two-year master coach program. She is the immediate past Vice Chair of the Global Board of the International Coach Federation, the largest association for professional coaches worldwide, where she served for five years, as Vice President and Director.
